DIVERSE AND DEVINE DECORATIVE ITEMS AT MICHAAN'S AUCTIONS

In the September Estate Sale the Jewelry Department presents its first offering of stickpins from the extensive collection of Jack Taylor (lot 036, $250-350, lot 037, $150-250, lot 038, $200-300, lot 039, $200-300). After years of working in the watch and jewelry businesses, Taylor began to take notice of stickpins that would show up in his jewelry store for re-manufacturing. Instead of disassembling the retro pins and converting them into more modern jewelry items, Taylor saved them from obscurity and began a stickpin collection. The affinity for stickpins that began in the late 1940's continued to grow up until his recent passing, with the collection reaching an impressive 427 pins. The pins are comprised of gold, gold-filled, silver, gemstone and pearl pieces in floral, novelty, masonic, monogram and cameo motifs, to name a few. Due to the large quantity the Taylor Collection will be offered for months to come, with the September Estate Sale giving the first glimpse into what is undoubtedly a jewelry treasure.

Stately decorative items dominate the Asian Department's September offerings with wonderfully unique items at the forefront of the sale. A few such intriguing pieces are a stone pig foot (lot 261, $800-1,200), a porcelain wall vase (lot 214, $250-350) and a porcelain pillow (lot 217, $700-900). Quite special in its own right is a Dehua style porcelain Guanyin (lot 223, $700-900). The seated

Conveying a touch of old world Italy is lot 470, an Italian Della Robbia style ceramic tondo ($500-700). Measuring 31 ½ inches in diameter, the piece centers a serene, gently colored Madonna and Child. The effect plays quite well against the vibrant blue background surrounding the figures as well as to the border of summer fruits and foliage encircling the piece. A perfect item for garden or outdoor decorating, the Italian renaissance styling and use of color make it an appealing addition to any decorative collection. The tondo will be offered amongst silver, period furniture and a multitude of decorative items.

Renowned California plein air painter Edgar Payne's "Sailboats in Harbor" highlight the Fine Art Department's September sale (lot 660, $10,000-15,000). Throughout his career Payne had an appreciation for natural locales of raw, rare beauty. This source of inspiration took him through the southwest, the Canadian Rockies in British Columbia and Alberta, Canada. Undoubtedly, the picturesque seaside was one of the factors that lead him to Laguna Beach, where he founded and became the first president of the Laguna Beach Art Association and the Gallery of Laguna Beach. It was during this time in the 1920's that he began painting sailboats. "Sailboats in Harbor" is a prime example of his technique and sense of composition. Quite striking is the use of bold color used in the sails that contrasts beautifully with the soft, muted tones of the surrounding sky and water. The angular lines of the sail masts provide visual drama and spatial separation, pulling the eye nicely about the composition as well.
