Michaan's February Estate Auction to be Held on Saturday the 7th February 2015 kicks off Michaan's new Saturday auction date

Over 130 jewelry department lots will include high-end fashion items in the February auction collection. Of the grouping are 5 lots of designer and vintage handbags, including maker names such as Gucci and Jay Herbert. Designers such as Gucci, Hermes, Chanel, Tiffany and Yves St. Laurent will be represented in 14 lots of silk scarves, along with assorted Louis Vuitton and Fendi items available for the couture collector. However, a beautiful serpent motif timepiece is spotlighted as lot 102 in the sale at an estimate of $600-900. The coiling snake wristwatch is fashioned as a hinged bangle, comprised of 18 karat yellow gold. The upper half of the body features white gold detail, with a small domed case just to the left of the ruby-eyed serpent head. The case is delicately adorned with three rubies interspaced by carvings of stars, finished by a single diamond in the center. When lifted, the dome reveals a watch face in working order, marked "RAMEX, ANCRE 17 JEWELS, ANTIMAGNETIC, SWISS." The consignor purchased the piece in a Parisian flea market in the 1980s, with the wristwatch likely to be from the late 1940s to early 1950s. During this period, cocktail rings were all the rage. Wearing a standard wristwatch tended to clash with the overall elegance of the desired look. Therefore, concealed timepieces such as this serpent wristwatch were more heavily manufactured, as they were more complimentary to the glamour inspired by the cocktail ring.

Two notable woodblock print artists are highlighted in a singular lot in February's Asian offerings (lot 169, $600-800). Woodblocks by Pieter Irwin Brown are represented in "Bei Hai, Peking" as well as in "Nan Hei, Peking." Also professionally known as Pieter van Oort, the European illustrator is credited with influencing the shin hanga movement of the 1930s. Book and print dealer P.D. Perkins once commented on Brown's distinctive style, stating, "...the strength of his prints lies, perhaps, in his elimination of non-essentials." This dedication to simplicity led to success for the artist, with his works featured in several exhibits in China and Japan, as well as at the Los Angeles County Museum in 1946. Accompanying the Brown pieces in the sale lot will be two small Utagawa Hiroshige landscape prints. Also known as Ando Hiroshige, he is recognized as the second of two great masters of the landscape art form, after Hokusai. Revered as "the artist of rain, snow and mist," Hiroshige's catalog contains a classic display of beautifully crisp and vibrant images.

Among the fine art portion of the sale are works of varied mediums. An oil painting by Russian artist Alexander Kanchik titled "Playing Cards" is found in lot 229 at an estimate of $1,000-1,500. At a conservative price point is an endearing image engraved by B. Hall titled "New York Street Urchins" at an estimate of $300-500 (lot 253). A pair of ink and watercolor works by Nikolai Petrovich Glushenko (lot 227, $1,500-1,800) will be offered alongside two highlighted lithographs from Robys at auction as well. Born in 1916 in a town known as Cherbourg in the Lower Normandy of France, Robys is primarily known as a poster artist and creator of humorous drawings. His lively and oft times energetic poster subjects seem to further come to life with the use of bold and saturated colors. His visuals are further enhanced by stylized, dominant lettering, in which the subject can come to interact with. One such example is found in lot 225 at an estimate of $1,600-2,000. "Bitter Secrestat, le plus ancien des apertitifs a la gentiane" is a circa 1935 image depicting a bar hand pouring the spirit into glasses perched upon the poster lettering. Bitter Secrestat was a gentiane-based aperitif that was once targeted at former absinthe drinkers following its ban. "Kina Lillet, au vin blanc de la gironde" is yet another celebration of a spirit, but this time from 1937 and printed by Affiches Stentor in Paris. In this poster, a woman bursts forth from a group of golden grapes as she holds the liquor in her outstretched hands. Kina Lillet was introduced in 1895 as an aperitif and tonic and quickly became known as "the aperitif of Bordeaux." The Kina Lillet image will likewise be sold in February, as lot 224 at an auction estimate of $1,200-1,600.
